

Manuela Mosca is Full Professor of the History of Economic Thought in the Department of Economics, University of Salento (Lecce, Italy). Her main research interests are: women in the history of economic thought, Italian Marginalism, the history of the theory of monopoly power.

President of AISPE (the Italian association for the history of economic thought), she is principal investigator of a national project on The Economic Thought of Italian Women (1750-1999).

She is in the advisory board of the Cambridge Element Series in the History of economic thought (Cambridge University Press), and in the editorial board of the Journal of the History of Economic Thought, and of the European Journal of the History of Economic Thought, among others.

In 2009 she was awarded with the best article prize by the History of Economics Society (USA) for the article "On the origins of the concept of natural monopoly", European Journal of the History of Economic Thought, (XV, 2008, n.2, pp. 317-353), and in 2019 with the best book prize by the same society for the book Monopoly Power and Competition. The Italian Marginalist Perspective, Cheltenham, Edward Elgar, 2018.

Recent publications:

“Women in economics: their thought and actions in the past” (Journal of European Economic History, LIII (3), 2024, pp. 9-28).

Edited book Women at work in Italy (1750-1950) and their economic thought, Springer, 2024, with a chapter (with Giandomenica Becchino) on “Aurelia Josz (1869-1944) and her school of agriculture for girls”

On intellectual legacies: Luigi Einaudi as a disciple of Antonio de Viti de Marco, with Giovanni Pavanelli, History of economics ideas, 2024, n.3.